Figure 20. Another view, in summer, from about the same time as the photo above. Note the dark painted window sashes and copper Gutters and downspouts. This photo makes it clear that the front addition was built later than the main body of the bungalow (look at the roof pitches and the deterioration of the original shingles. Also note the shed in the background left, on the far side of Walhonding Road, where the ravine is now. Photographer unknown, but suspected to be by Maya W. Wukusha, courtesy of the Rogers family
